1.What are your core values and beliefs?
Ans: Being consistent to work and   completing it on time is what I prefer. Also the honesty and dedication towards the work is must. So we workers should be polite and must respect each other. I strongly believe that by being honest and united any company can achieve higher success.

2.What are your goals and aspirations?
Ans: At present my main goal is to earn a job or join as an intern with my skills in the post of MERN stack developer. My aspiration is to work internationally as a full stack developer.

3.What are the first steps you will take to build your personal brand?
Ans: As a web developer I can form my linkedin profile like a professional in order to build my personal brand. I can connect with different IT companies and web developers connected to those companies. I can post my skills and interests towards the work regularly. Secondly as I am a web developer, my GitHub account helps me to build my personal brand so that my different unique projects can be shown. Which also includes to form my GitHub account nicely and professionally.

4.How does personal branding differ from self-promotion, and why is this distinction important?
Ans: Personal branding and self-promotion are related concepts, but they have distinct differences. Understanding these differences is crucial for individuals looking to establish a positive professional image and navigate their careers effectively.
Personal branding is strategic and focuses on long-term goals. It involves building a consistent and authentic image that aligns with your values and aspirations.
Self-promotion is the proactive effort to promote and showcase oneself, one's skills, achievements. It involves marketing oneself to gain visibility, recognition, and opportunities in personal or professional contexts.

5.What are you most proud of?
Ans: I've completed Programming Hero's Web Development course in time by breaking all the barriers and reached at SCIC. And for this I feel proud of myself. But the journey is not over yet as the destination is long.